"It is refreshing to have someone remind me to actually focus on me for a change! This workshop helped me to take the time to reflect on my values, where I am at in my life now, and to think about how much I am juggling things and racing through the day without taking the time to breathe and reflect. This workshop was such a gift! Thank you Randi!

~ Jen Altman, Psychologist

What happens when the way you have always done something is no longer fulfilling?

Living the lives we want can be hard work. Reinvention is all about becoming more of who you said you wanted to be and closing the gap between an ordinary everyday life and an extraordinary purposeful connection. We are all always in transition, struggling with issues of balance, time, life purpose, passion and empathy. We may be searching for a "forgotten" piece of who we were or gabbling with issues of perfection or self-image. Overwhelmed, it may seem as if we are no longer in control of our own calendars, energy or relationships. Sometimes, we just get stuck.

My presentations are designed to engross, involve, and inspire my participants to gain new perspectives and to better understand themselves. Empowering and uplifting, my workshops and lectures emphasize choice, change, and transformation while integrating actionable steps toward redefining and realigning personal growth. We all have the ability to discover our own solutions. In order to uncover them, we just need someone to ask the right questions; the kind of questions that challenge us to think and explore. What's next? There is always a next...

"The energy in the room was great! I loved all of the tips on time and the interaction between everyone. You presented a wonderful and meaningful workshop that highlighted ways to make myself a priority and better control my time. Loved the coloring!"
